FRANKFORT WOMAN HAS 2 HUBBIES

PREFERS HUBBY NO. 1 AND DITCHES HUBBY NO. 2 BUT FINDS SHE IS WED TO BOTH AS DIVORCE DECREE IS ANNULLED

As a rule most women are wondering how they are going to get a husband, but Mrs. Elizabeth Dittich Harms of Frankfort is blest with two husbands and is in a quandry what to do with the surplus husband.

Mrs. Dittich, on June 30th, 1924 filed a bill for divorce and injunction against her husband, Lawrence Dittich, but a few days after the filing of the bill relented and again lived with Mr. Dittich as his wife. Mrs. Dittich owns property in Frankfort and said that Dittich had threatened to burn the house down if she did not let him live with her again. Later on without amending her bill she went into court on September 24th, and obtained a decree of divorce.

Two or three weeks after her divorce was granted she was united in marriage with Edward Harms who had been a star boarder at the Dittich home. The couple located in Chicago Heights.

Dittich was a much surprised man, contending that he had not been notified that the divorce suit was to be tried and on these grounds he filed a petition thru attorney Frank Brumund asking that the decree be set aside.

The case was argued several weeks ago before Judge Hill and was taken under advisement. Without notifying the attorneys for either side, Mrs. Dittich-Harms appeared in court Monday and told Judge Hill that she was no longer living with Harms, and that she wished to have the divorce decree set aside as she wanted to live with husband No. 1 again. The Judge was greatly surprised and notified the attorneys for both sides of the affair. When asked what about her marriage to Harms, Mrs. Dittich-Harms said, "that marriage don't count now."

As it stands now, the woman is Mrs. Dittich and also Mrs. Harms as she is virtually married to both men. How this legal puzzle will be solved is a question for the Judge or a jury to decide.

Monday night she met Dittich in the law office of Orr & Brumund in Joliet and the pair conversed for over an hour and a half or more. When they parted Dittich kissed her goodbye and went back to Frankfort.

Now husband No. 2 is alone in his home in Chicago Heights, wondering whether he or Dittich will be awarded the right to the title of husband of the one woman both men claim as their wife.

The much married lady is now visiting with her parents in Lockport.

Attorney A. H. Krusemark has been consul for Mrs. Dittich-Harms, and Orr & Brumund represented Mr. Dittich.

HASENJAGER TO MAKE RACE FOR GREEN GARDEN SUPERVISORSHIP IS REPORT

Town politics in Green Garden are getting pretty warm, even tho the Spring election is some ways off yet. The big fight is going to center on the job of supervisor. It is said Wm. Bettenhausen, the present supervisor will be a candidate for re-election and that Fred Hasenjaeger is going to be his opponent. Mr. Hasenjaeger is a well known figure in Green Garden politics and has held the office of supervisor off and on for 23 years.

Liberia Has Not Been Abandoned According to Lane

The question is being repeatedly asked, "What has become of the Liberia movement?"

In order to give our readers the information sought on this subject The News-Bulletin dispatched an inquiry to the Liberia Land and Development Association in Chicago asking whether the Liberia Movement has been abandoned and the Editor is in receipt of the following reply from Andrew J. Lane, General Manager of the Liberia Land and Development Association.

"Your letter of the 12th inst., at hand, and of course I cannot blame you for the inquiry you make.

"You have not seen us because of the weather as you understand, but don't imagine for one minute that the Liberia project was, or is in any way abandoned. Even in anticipation, I am writing an article now that I will mail you in sufficient time to satisfy all the doubting Thomases in your city.

Liberia is the same with us today as it was the day we started."

The buck is being passed some where. The Chamberlain interests deny that the Liberia people have any possession of the Chamberlain farm in New Lenox township while on the other hand the Liberia promoters say their plan has never been abandoned. This affair is surely proving a real cross word puzzle.

Car Skids in Ditch; Driver Not Hurt

Joe Lorenz of Mokena had a narrow escape from serious injury last Friday morning when his Ford skidded and upset in the ditch along side the highway near the Alvis Duncan place. Mr. Lorenz was knocked senseless and woke up to find him self wrapped around a tree. The car was badly damaged. Two wheels were broken off beside other damages. The wrecked car was towed into the Cooper & Hostert garage at Mokena for repairs.

Draws Gas By Lantern Light; Result-Explosion

Early Tuesday morning Fred Steunkel residing on a farm near Richton, needed some gasoline and as it was still dark, he lit his lantern and went into a shed to draw some from a large tank into a can.

Soon as the gasoline started running the gas fumes became ignited from the lantern and an explosion followed which set fire to the shed and the flames spread quickly to adjoining buildings resulting in the destruction of a barn, tool shed, grainery with 3000 bushels of oats, chicken house and other small buildings which caused a loss of several thousands of dollars.

Luckily Mr. Steunkel was not hurt himself. A call was sent to Frankfort for the chemical truck at the Frankfort department could not respond on account of the distance from home, they fearing to leave their own town unprotected. Never go near gasoline with a lamp, lantern nor lighted match. Use a flash light only. Do not light a match to see how much gas there is in a tank. Always play safe, for gasoline is very dangerous to take a chance.

After the water was turned on, not much damage being done.

A story of today, one of the most interesting you have ever read—

The Truant Soul

By Victor Rousseau

It will engage your attention in a manner different from that of the average novel. Its characters are unusual and remarkable. It begins in the operating room of a large hospital and shows a famous surgeon plying the scalpel in a clinic before an assemblage of doctors, nurses and internes. From such an atmosphere it journeys quickly to a placid retreat in the mountains of a southern state and introduces hill folks and other new characters. It is amazing in its incidents, its mystery and its actors.

Harvey Man Is Overcome By Sick Spell at Tinley

While John Fahrenholz was coming along the concrete road north of Tinley Park Sunday morning he found a man lying alongside of an auto. He was brought to the office of Dr. Ickstadt in Tinley Park. He was in a semi-comatose state when he was carried into the physician's office, but finally was able to say that he was from Harvey, that he had a family and that he had been stricken very ill to his stomach when he tried to crank his car and was so overcome he sank to the ground and was unable to get up again. After being given first aid treatment the stranger was removed to the Harvey hospital.

Why Should Our Uncle Sam Butt In Envelope Business?

We are hearing a great deal about the postal deficit running into millions of dollars and the postal department is considering raising the postage on Newspapers to make up part of this deficit. This shows how inconsistent the government is.

In the first place they are butting into the envelope manufacturers and local printers field by turning out printed and stamped envelopes for almost nothing, less than it costs the government to produce, the tax payers paying this deficit, so no envelope manufacturer or printer can compete with them.

Twelve million envelopes are made and printed daily by the government print shops, depriving many factories and printers of this business. These envelopes are used by 50,000 postmasters thruout the United States without any charge to the envelope and printing plants. These envelopes are delivered free to the consumer in any part of the United States. Now who does pay this postage? It takes men in the post offices to handle and deliver these free delivery and less than cost envelopes, who by the way are asking for more pay which has been denied them so far. The taxpayer of course pays this postage, but wouldn't it be far better to cut out this unbusinesslike way and let this tax pay just wages of the postal force?

Mokena on Eve of Real Estate and Building Boom

Mokena is facing a real estate boom from present indications. The Arthur T. McIntosh Co., of Chicago realtors who purchased the former Ben Marti property north of Mokena last fall, are contemplating doing big things this year.

According to a statement from Mr. A. T. McIntosh, his company proposes to subdivide the 40 acres they own in and adjoining Mokena to the north into lots varying from 50x150 to 100x300 feet in size.

The 160 acres on Marti Street, just north of the village limits, they propose to divide into 16 lots, having a frontage on Marti Road of 330 feet each and a depth of about 1320 feet.

The 10 acre lots are for sale at the present time for $3,500 per lot and up, upon terms of $500 cash and $35 per month.

The lots in the village are to be ready to be put on the market within the next thirty days Mr. McIntosh declared.

It is hoped that these lots will be taken up by home builders, which will be a big stride toward the up-building of Mokena.

With the opening of this subdivision it will be necessary to have a good highway and a movement should be inaugurated to have the state concrete the north and south road running past this subdivision as this highway connects up with the Lincoln highway south of Mokena and with the concrete road a mile west of Orland on the north end.

A strong concerted action were taken in this direction it might be possible to get the state highway department to concrete this road. If such a project were carried out it would surely mean a real big boom for Mokena.

The regular postage to pay for the stock and the printing is thrown in for good measure. No wonder the postal department is showing a deficit, when such unbusiness like methods are carried on. Beside the government printed envelope business is a great injustice to the printing industry and is unfair in like manner. Let the government cut out this foolishness and there will not be such a heavy postal deficit.

If the government is so anxious to butt in the retail business, why doesn't it handle merchandise on the same basis as they do their printed envelope business? How would merchants feel then?

There is a bill pending now to abolish the government printed envelope law and we hope that this will be enacted into a law, as it rightly should be.

It is time that the envelope manufacturers and printers get together and demand that this unfair government practice be abolished forever. Why should these two lines of business be singled out alone in this unfair competition?

On the other hand the local plants must pay city, school, corporation, income and state taxes; must employ salesmen, pay railroad fares, hotel bills, freight on the goods which they ship out, while the government plant is relieved of most of these expenses, which certainly is unfair to printers and manufacturers. The government plant also has an advantage because of the way the postmasters send in their orders. All the plant must do is slip in a changed corner card. The printing is done on a high-speed automatic presses, such as no local plant can afford, because they can not get enough orders to keep such presses busy and what business they do get, their own salesmen must find, as the business is not handed to him free of all expenses by the postmasters.

Want Farmers to Raise Sugar Beets

The beet sugar manufacturers of Riverdale and Dalton are finding that the constantly expanding city is crowding the beet sugar growers out of their vicinity. New acreage is therefore being sought further west.

Efforts were made last year to get the farmers around Tinley Park interested in growing sugar beets, but as this is a new crop the farmers were rather reluctant, but two of them did try it and were well satisfied with the results.

In order to present the raising of sugar beets in a more explanatory way before the farmers, a mass meeting will be held at the Tinley Park village hall on Saturday afternoon, January 17th, at 1:30 o'clock, at which time members of the Mid-West Beet Sugar Corporation will give addresses on the raising of sugar beets and will show what big money making crop they are.

Every farmer is invited to attend this meeting. If this meeting is successful a meeting may also be held at Mokena later on the same matter.

"His Majesty, The American" Comes Marley Jan. 18

This picture in the first place, tells a genuine story, which we are not going to spoil your pleasure by repeating here. Whether the story is probable or not doesn't matter. It is entertaining in a high degree, and that is what we seek in a picture.

W. H. Bechstein Elected President

Of Mokena Bank

W. H. Bechstein, Mokena grain dealer and former secretary of the Mokena State Bank was elected to the office of president of this institution at the annual meeting of the board of directors held Wednesday morning. Henry Schlutz of Joliet was elected secretary. Emil P. Krapp was chosen vice president and Geo. J. Hacker was named cashier. Karl E. Krapp was re-appointed teller.

Mr. Bechstein succeeds his uncle the late Christ Bechstein as the head of the bank.

The bank reports a very good year. An 8 per cent dividend was declared and $4,103.38 placed in the reserve fund. This bank made 8 per cent on their earnings which is considered an excellent record.

If we want serious, heavy, problem dramas we don't expect Fairbanks to furnish them to us. "His Majesty the American" is made to amuse, and that it does from start to finish. It is Bright, Snappy, and Clean—a picture that will delight boys and girls from five to eight-five.

So much for the story. But after all, don't the majority of us go mainly to see Fairbanks in whatever he happens to be playing in? And isn't the big question—just Doug?

The answer is—yes, Doug!

He is in the picture, right in the middle of it, from beginning to end, and the things he does and the way he does them leave you suspended midway between nervous prostration and love for his downright daring and ever-present smile.

We start with him in a wild and delicious nightmarish, then rush to a fire, then to a police raid on an underworld dive, then to Mexico and the border, where he cleans up the bandits, then to Europe where he takes a hand at bossing a revolution—and while we are fagged out and worn to a frazzle by the pace he has set, he does it all over again, calm and smiling, in the next show—and we are tempted to stay and see him do it.

All in all, "His Majesty, the American" scores, and scores heavily. It is about as much honest, wholesome fun as can possibly be crowded into a film. Long may Doug be with us to add to the joy of life!

Made Work in Kitchen Easier and Quicker

Have you heard how happy Mrs. Smith is? Her experience is typical of others, according to Mrs. Marion C. Bell, specialist in home management at the State College of Agriculture, New Brunswick, N. J. Mrs. Smith says that no one ever called her attention to the height of her sink and her work table until the local home management leader spent a morning with her in her home. Then, to her surprise, she discovered she was leaning over her sink and work table in a very uncomfortable position and had been doing so for the ten years of her married life, says the New York Evening Telegram and Mail.

Instead of saying, "I'll change that some day," she went to work at once. By means of good ball-bearing rollers purchased for 40 cents the table was raised and thereby made not only a comfortable work center but a more useful one, as it can now easily be moved close to the stove, window, dining room door, or sink, as needed. She says it has already saved her many steps and much fatigue and that her next improvement will be the raising of the kitchen sink.

Cause for Jealousy

She came to court and demanded a separation.

"Yes," said the magistrate, "but on what grounds? There must be some cause for complaint."

She knitted her brows. "I got cause enough, sir. I've caught 'im 'tting another woman."

Lesson for January 18

THE LAST SUPPER

LESSON TEXT—Luke 22:7-30.
GOLDEN TEXT—"This is My body which is given for you; this do in remembrance of Me."—Luke 22:19.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Lord's Supper.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Meaning of the Communion Service.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Communion With Jesus Christ.

I. The Passover Prepared (vv. 7-13.)

1. The Disciples' Inquiry (vv. 7-9). They inquired of Jesus as to where they should prepare for the Passover. They no doubt were anxious to be of service to Him.

2. The Master's Strange Directions (vv. 10-12). They were to go into the city where they would meet a man bearing a pitcher of water. He assured them that they would then be shown a large upper room furnished.

3. The Obedience of the Disciples (v. 13). They did not stop to question the sanity of the command but like true disciples obeyed. Jesus, because He is omniscient, knew just how the matter would turn out.

II. The Passover Eaten (vv. 14-18).

1. By Whom (v. 14)? Those who sat down to this last Passover feast were the Master and the Twelve Apostles.

2. His Words Unto Them (vv. 15-18).

(1) "I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer." How anxious He was to show them the meaning of the passion through which He was to go; also He craved their human sympathy as He passed through this trying ordeal.

(2) "I will not any more eat thereof, until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God." His death was the antitypical fulfillment of the passover meal. He looked forward to that time when the process of redemption would have been completed and a perfect union between the disciples and the Lord would be consummated.

(3) "Take this cup and divide it among yourselves." The disciples were now partaking of that symbol of His blood. He assured them that He would not again drink of the fruit of the vine until the kingdom of God should come. Drinking anew in the kingdom does not mean that in heaven this service will be renewed, but that this was symbolic of the heavenly reality.

This took place at the close of the paschal supper.

1. The Bread, a Symbol of Christ's Body (v. 19). Christ giving of Himself to them. In order to get benefit from physical bread it is necessary to receive it. In order to get benefit from Christ one must receive Him.

2. The Cup, a Symbol of Christ's Blood (v. 20). This was symbolic of the atonement which was made by the shedding of His blood on the cross. He said: "This cup is the new testament in My blood which was shed for you," indicating that each one must personally accept the atonement made by the shedding of His blood.

IV. The Wicked Behaviour at the Feast (vv. 21-27).

1. The Treachery of Judas (vv. 21-23).

(1) The time of its manifestation (v. 21). It was while they were eating the last passover that Jesus made the announcement of the betrayal. Perhaps the reason why this feast was disturbed by such an announcement was that Judas might be given an opportunity at this last moment to repent.

(2) The betrayal was by the determine counsel of God (v. 22—cf. Acts 2:23). Nothing takes place by chance. Even the evil, sinful acts of men come within the permissive providence of God, but this does not lessen the guilt, for Jesus says: "Woe unto the man by whom He is betrayed."

(3) Sorrowful question (v. 23). The disciples did not seem to suspect one another, but made the question a personal one.

2. Selfish Ambition of the Disciples (vv. 24-27). In this tragic hour the disciples were so concerned with the thought of honorable position that they were striving among themselves as to who should be greatest.

V. The Apostles' Place in the Kingdom (vv. 28-30).

He assures them that those who continue with Him in His trials shall be appointed unto a place in the kingdom which will entitle them to eat and drink at His table and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel.

GERMANY TO PAY U.S.$600,000,000

Allies Allow Full Demands for Losses and Occupational Expenses.

Paris.—The British and American delegations at the conference of the allied finance ministers have reached a final and definite accord relative to the payment to the United States of the costs of the army of occupation and war damage claims, it was officially announced here.

The agreement is subject to ratification by a plenary session of the conference, but, inasmuch as France, Italy, and Belgium entered the negotiations already pledged to support the American viewpoint, and divergencies existed only between the British and Americans, ratification is regarded as a foregone conclusion.

The United States under the terms of the agreement will receive about $25,000,000 yearly for twenty-five years on the total of her claims, amounting to approximately $600,000,000.

The sum remaining due for the costs of the American occupation is fixed at between $250,000,000 and $260,000,000, while the amount of war damage claims the conference has agreed will be based on the findings of the mixed claims commission.

This has been tentatively fixed at $350,000,000.

The terms of the agreement provide:

1. The payment to the United States of 55,000,000 gold marks yearly by priority on the cash payments under the Dawes plan to apply on the American army of occupation costs. These payments are to begin September 1, 1926.

2. The United States will share in the Dawes annuities at the rate of 24 per cent, the total payment not to exceed 45,000,000 gold marks annually, beginning retroactively September 1, 1924.

3. The American representatives have agreed that this latter amount should not exceed $350,000,000 or with interest, roughly, 1,500,000,000 gold marks.

4. The United States obtains the immediate release and possession of $15,000,000 now in the federal reserve bank, which was deposited there by the allies under the Wadsworth agreement.

German sequestrated property in the United States, including German tonnage, it is believed, will be held as security for the American claim, or the amount of their value shall be deducted from the capital claim should they be definitely appropriated.

Sentiment to Abide by Law Need of World—Hughes

Atlanta, Ga.—The one great need of the world is "not some formula or rule but a law-abiding sentiment throughout the land—the disposition to be reasonable, to be fair, to settle things according to available standards of justice, to enforce the conceptions of justice against the demonstrations of brute force," Secretary of States Charles E. Hughes declared in an address here.

Mr. Hughes' address was delivered at a banquet in honor of himself and other members of the executive committee of the American Bar association. He made no reference to his recent resignation from the cabinet.

"I am glad to feel that in this country, for a time at least," Mr. Hughes said, "we have the Supreme Court of the United States secure from the attacks of politicians."

Labor Wage Scale in U. S. Highest in History

Washington.—Union labor's wage scale is higher than it has ever been before, according to the United States bureau of labor statistics, which has just completed a national wage scale survey. Collectively, the hourly union wage rate of 1924 was 8.3 per cent higher than 1923; 99.8 per cent higher than in 1917; 128 per cent higher than in 1913, and 141 per cent higher than in 1907. Hours of labor this year were 4.10 of 1 per cent less than last year, 4.6 per cent less than in 1917; 6.1 per cent less than in 1913, and 8.5 per cent less than in 1907.

Electors Cast Ballots For Dawes and Coolidge

Washington.—Electors cast their ballots for Calvin Coolidge and Charles G. Dawes, in the electoral college. The electors met in their respective states, canvassed the state vote in accordance with the Constitution and cast their electoral votes for the candidates for whom they were elected to vote. The vote of the electors will be certified to the president of the senate by each of the 48 states and will be opened at a joint session of the senate and house on February 18.

No Liquor From Canada

LIGHT saves time

TESTS conducted by the Wisconsin College of Agriculture show that it takes one-third less time to stable and feed the cows when good lighting replaces lanterns.

Scientific analysis proves Carbide-gas lighting to be the nearest to daylight of all artificial illuminants. Not only does it save time in the barn—it saves oculists' bills in the home, and saves the farm wife hours of drudgery by supplying facilities for Union Carbide-gas cooking and ironing.

"ABIE'S IRISH ROSE"

to Leave Studebaker
on Saturday, Jan. 31.

"Abie's Irish Rose," the sensational stage success of the hour, will leave Chicago in about three weeks. The engagement at the Studebaker positively will not be extended beyond Saturday, Jan. 31.

Announcement of the last two weeks has just been made in Chicago where "Abie" is now in its 54th week on Michigan avenue. This will give a total of 58 weeks, a record that has only been beaten once and five weeks more than its nearest competitor in long-run contests.

Just where the show will go next is not known at the present time. There are dozens of cities including Philadelphia and Boston that are clamoring for a booking. Milwaukee is looked upon by the management as the logical spot to drop in for a short visit.

Remember, only four more weeks! The last time is January 31 and other arrangements at the Studebaker preclude any chance of extending the run.

The Studebaker is a beautiful theater with a good orchestra and the ideal place to see this miracle play. Matinees are given on Wednesday and Saturdays and there is a performance every night including Sundays. Now is the very best time to go. If you wait you'll be too late.

However, the Studebaker is prepared to look after the visitors and all mail orders will be given prompt and cheerful attention.

Quick Way to Stop Them

Persistent, racking coughing, which rapidly weakens your entire system, lays you open to more dangerous infections, can be checked with the first dose of that old-time tried and proved remedy—Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey. And there's a reason. Doctors say there is nothing like pine-tar to quickly loosen and remove the phlegm and congestion which is the direct cause of the coughing, while the honey both gives a pleasant taste and helps soothe irritation. It is often astonishing how quickly this combination relieves the stubbornest cough.

But be sure you get the original Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey, and no substitute. Dr. Bell's has been known for over a quarter of a century as the best. It is scientifically compounded of just the right proportions of pine-tar, honey and other ingredients. No opiates or other harmful drugs, no can be given even to young children—fine for spasmodic croup. If you want the best, a medicine that often relieves the severest cough overnight, make sure you get Dr. Bell's. Only 50c at any good druggist's.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

THE EFFECT OF HIGH TEMPERATURE

FAT men endure high temperature and humidity better than thin men. This has been proved by the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers, in co-operation with the United States bureau of mines and Carnegie Institute of Technology, at Pittsburgh. In experiments to determine the relative effect of various temperatures and humidities on the human body, the scientists also found that sweat is the chief factor, causing sore eyes, when a person becomes heated.

Another common belief was blasted during the experiments when it was found that the drinking of ice water failed to develop cramps in men after they had been subjected to an hour's exposure to high temperature.

The object of the research work was to establish, by scientific study, the exact degree of temperature, and of humidity, or "comfort lines," a person should be subjected to in a room. The first experiments were to study the physiological effects of various temperatures and humidities on human subjects at rest in still air, and for these, a staff of physicians and employees of the society have subjected themselves to great hardships.

One of the important results of the experiments was the discovery of the great variations of external temperature which the human being can endure, and at the same time retain his physiological efficiency. Another fact discovered was that increasing pulse rate was more the cause of discomfort than is body temperature, when in a heated room.

In a report of the experiments are these assertions: While irrelevant to the present study, an attempt was made to determine the cause of the inflammation of the eyes, and also to find out whether or not the drinking of ice water produces cramps, as so frequently complained of by workers in the industries. On a day when the eyes were normal a small quantity of sweat which had been collected during an experiment was dropped in the eye. The conjunctiva almost immediately became inflamed and the eye felt sore. The sweat collected from the face seemed less irritable to the eye than that collected either from the chest or arms. Sweatbands were then applied to the forehead during the experiments, thus preventing the sweat from falling into the eyes and also preventing the inflammation. This proves that the sweat is the chief factor in producing the conjunctivitis which accompanies exposure to heat.

It has frequently been stated that workers exposed to high temperatures developed severe cramps after drinking ice water. A few of the subjects of these experiments volunteered to drink ice water after an hour's exposure to high temperature, and two of them, in one experiment, drank a quart of ice water in less than fifteen minutes without ill effects.

PREVENTING MENTAL ILLS

MANY people have much the same ideas about feeble-mindedness that they have about germs. They think that all feeble-minded persons are dangerous and that all germs are harmful. This is not true in either case. Only about one germ out of forty produces disease, and only a small number of feeble-minded persons are vicious.

Out of 3,500 school children found mentally below normal, less than 7 per cent showed any vicious tendencies. Many feeble-minded persons who have been given careful training and special education during childhood have become useful members of the community, capable of earning their own living.

The child which is below normal can be educated, not to the extent of a normal child, but enough to make it nearer normal than it would otherwise be. Without special care and training, however, the feeble-minded child is apt to grow worse. Too often, it is regarded as wilfully stupid or vicious. It is blamed and punished at home, it is teased and picked on by other children, it is either not sent to school at all or it is neglected and punished by the teacher, who does not understand the reason for its stupidity.

If it is recognized early and given suitable training by an understanding teacher, it may develop into a self-supporting adult.

We are just beginning to learn that the feeble-minded child needs special care and treatment just as do persons who are suffering from tuberculosis, typhoid fever or pneumonia. Letting them alone or shutting them up in institutions will not help them, or anyone else.

Many of our states are now endeavoring, by early examinations, especially on entering the public schools, to sort out defective children from normal ones and to give them such special training as they need.

It is estimated that the feeble-minded persons in the United States form 1 per cent of the population. This means that there are probably 200,000 children who need special training. To allow these children to grow up in state institutions and to live at the expense of the taxpayers, is impossible. So prevention is not only the best and the most humane method, but by far the cheapest.

Sowing One's "Wild Oats" Old English Expression

To "sow wild oats" means to commit youthful excesses or to spend one's time in dissipation. It usually implies subsequent reform. The expression originated, so far as known, among the country folks of England. Wild oats—a tall grass resembling the cultivated oat and probably its original progenitor—is a common weed in grain fields. It is natural that a weed so common and obnoxious should become the subject of a comparison among the country people. The expression dates back as far at least as the Sixteenth century. At first it merely meant sowing worthless seed or seed which would produce a worthless crop. The moral meaning was a natural transition from the literal significance. He who wastes the precious days of his youthful prime in dissipation is sowing seeds which will grow up into obnoxious weeds.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Ostracism Old Custom

Ostracism is from the Greek word, ostrakon, a potsherd or shell. It meant a mode of proscription introduced into Athens early in the Sixth century B. C. The people wrote the names of those whom they most suspected upon small shells. These they put in an urn or box and presented to the senate. Upon a scrutiny, if whose name was oftener written was sentenced by the council to be banished. Six thousand votes were required. The custom was abolished about 800 B. C.

The Morris canal in New Jersey, abandoned for years and now drained, has turned out to be a veritable coal mine. Internal cleanliness protects against disease

IN CONSTIPATION, say intestinal specialists, lies the primary cause of more than three-quarters of all illness, including the gravest diseases of life.

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favour Lubrication

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

Feel Stiff and Achy After Every Cold? Do You Have Constant Backache? Feel Old and Lame and Suffer Sharp, Rheumatic Pains? Then Look to Your Kidneys!

DOES every cold, chill or attack of grip leave you worn-out and utterly miserable? Do you feel old and lame, stiff and rheumatic? Does your back ache with a dull, unceasing throb, until it seems you just can't stand it any longer?

Then look to your kidneys! Grip, colds and chills are mighty hard on the kidneys. They fill the blood with poisons and impurities that the kidneys must filter off. The kidneys weaken under this rush of new work; become congested and inflamed.

It's little wonder, then, that every cold leaves you with torturing backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness and annoying bladder irregularities.

Don't delay! Get a box of Doan's Pills. Give your weakened kidneys the help they need. Assist them, also, by drinking pure water freely, eating lightly and getting plenty of fresh air and rest. Doan's Pills have helped thousands and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

"Use Doan's," Say These Good Folks:

MRS. A. BATES, 506 W. 1st St., Dixon, Ill., says: "Bearing down pains in the small of my back bothered me when I first got up in the morning. I just felt lame and stiff all over. Catches across my kidneys felt like the edge of a knife sticking in and made me feel all out of sorts. The kidney secretions were scanty. After using Doan's Pills I was soon rid of the trouble."

C. H. HENSCH, 309 E. Fellows St., Dixon, Ill., says: "I had dull pains through my back which bothered me a good bit of the time. Sharp catches across my kidneys took the life out of me and I felt tired and worn out. Occasionally dizzy spells came over me and specks appeared before my eyes. I had to get up many times at night to pass the kidney secretions. I used Doan's Pills and they rid me of the trouble."

"I—I— Mrs. Archman's eyes widened and her lips quivered. 'Oh! What shall I say?' she cried. 'You don't know—you don't understand. I've got to tell you,' she went on desperately. 'Nellie isn't my own daughter, though I love her as if she were. She—she—Nellie! Hasn't your father told you anything?'"

Nellie's lips were white. "My father?" she echoed. "Who is my father?"

"I can't tell you. Henry never told me. It wasn't his secret. But I suspect—I suspect—"

"I do, too," Nellie nodded slowly. "I've suspected for some time. Father said something. Mr. Dorth said more. And Captain Strindberg—but that's got nothing to do with Jim." She stretched out her hand to the young man. "We'll let it go for the present, but I'm going to marry Jim. Come on. I want to see the scene of the fight."

Van Kull shook his shoulders as if tossing off some heavy load. "Come along, then," he said. "But prepare yourself. I guess some of the mutineers are pretty badly wounded. The sight won't be a very pretty one."

Every one of the women caught her breath. "Oh! How wicked of me!" gasped Nellie. "I—I didn't realize that men were dying out there. We must try to help."

The debris of the fight was being rapidly cleared away. Half a dozen dead were laid out on the banks, but nearly all the prisoners, both those who were wounded and those who were not, had been put into the boats under guard, ready to be sent out to the destroyer.

Only Price remained on shore, watched by two sentinels. Clearly he was being reserved for some particular fate. But he met Nellie's eyes undauntedly as the party passed near him. "Well! You beat me," he gritted. "They're going to string me up out of hand, I reckon."

Nellie stepped back uncertainly. "You—I'm sorry," she said faintly.

"You ain't got any cause to be sorry," returned the man grimly. "I was going to do for you, all right, and for all the rest of your folks, too. And I'd ha' done it if it hadn't been for these Danes. D—n 'em! What on earth brings a Danish destroyer over here, anyway? I wish I could get some more of 'em before I croak." His eyes followed Strindberg's form anxiously, as the latter moved to and fro directing the movements of his men.

"Say, lady," he went on. "I don't bear you no malice. I don't bear none of your crowd no malice. It's only those crazy Danes, butting in where they ain't got no business. I don't bear you no malice and I'll tell you something. That there woman's playing dirt on you." He gestured toward Miss Denslow. "I reckon she's the one that did that signaling. Anyway, she's disgraced, and—"

For a moment the man glared at Miss Denslow; then his hand shot out and caught at her white hair. The guards caught at him, but they were too late. The hair came away, exposing beneath it a pile of closely bound chestnut locks that crowned a face that had suddenly become twenty years younger.

As Miss Denslow shrank back with a cry, drowned in a chorus of exclamations, Price burst out into a cackling laugh. "I thought so," he cried. "You're Edith Grant."

"No, she isn't," Young Archman sprang to the girl's side. "She's Edith Archman."

"Well, I'll be hanged!" The exclamation came from Van Kull, who was staring at the girl in amazement. "I thought you looked familiar, but I never saw you clearly since—"

Nellie broke in. "Yes! I remember!" she exclaimed. "You were at Miss Grant's cottage that night. You knew her—"

"Knew her? Of course, I knew her! She's my sister, Edith Van Kull. She wanted to be an actress, and father wouldn't have it and so she went ahead on her own. Well, I guess that's over now. Congratulate you, brother-in-law." He held out his hand to Harry Archman.

Lord George stepped forward. "May I also offer good wishes?" he asked. Then as Edith took his hand, he turned to the others. "I had the pleasure of seeing Miss Grant—Mrs. Archman—on the stage once," he said. "I recognized her on the El Rio and I didn't quite understand, don't you know?"

Mrs. Archman had stood, bewildered for a moment, but as Edith turned toward her with trembling lips she suddenly reached out her arms. "There! There! Dear!" she cried. "It's all right. It doesn't matter who you are or what you are. You've been the dearest girl in the world to me on this trip. I'm glad that Harry has got you!"

"And I am, too!" Bess held out her hand. "But I hope you're not going to stop being my governess. Of course, we haven't really begun lessons yet, but—" She broke off with a shriek.

Captain Strindberg had come up behind Lord George. Just as he reached the party, Price, who was still waiting under guard a few feet away, snatched a pistol from the belt of one of his watchers and fired point-blank at Strindberg. "Now I've got you, you d—n butter-in!" he yelled.

As he pulled the trigger the other guard struck at him and the bullet went wild.

But it did not miss altogether. Lord George whirled half around and staggered back, clapping his hand to his left arm.

Before he could fall, Bess caught him. "He's killed! Oh! My G—d! He's killed," she shrieked. Her tones told a story all their own.

Lord George read it. Cadlike he caught his footing. "Not a blooming bit of it, Bess," he said. "The beggar only got me through the arm. What? For half a second he hesitated, then before them all, he kissed her squarely on the lips.

As he did so Archman ran up. "Hey! What's this?" he cried. "What's all this mean?"

Bess snatched at him. "Don't swear, pops!" she counseled innocently. "Save your cuss words. You've got worse shocks than this coming." She glanced at Edith and then at Nellie. "However, we won't talk about that now. Just shake hands with Lord George and—"

But Strindberg broke in. While the others talked, he had been acting. Crimson with rage he had sprung toward the guards, who, too late, had fallen upon Price like thunderbolts. "Fools! Dolt! Blockheads!" he cried. Then he spun round on his lieutenant, who came running up. "Take that man out of sight and hang him to the nearest tree!" he ordered.

The lieutenant saluted, gave a brisk order, and the men closed in around Price and marched him away up the slope of the ravine. Then the captain broke in on Bess' words. "Mr. Archman," he ordered sharply, "be good enough to lead me to his highness!"

For perhaps ten minutes Archman's boat, with its lantern gleaming at the bow, pushed on through the darkness, following the convolutions of the stream. At last a gleam of daylight appeared ahead, evidently shining in through some opening in the rocks. Close to it Archman's boat stopped and its passengers clambered out.

"This is as far as the boats can go at this stage of the tide, captain," he explained, as the latter's boat came up. "At high tide we can row through, but at present the channel beyond the opening is practically dry and we have to walk. If you will follow—"

Strindberg bowed. "Lead on," he said.

The distance to be traversed was not great, and luckily so, for to unaccustomed adventurers the surroundings were terrifying. Geyserlike bursts of steam puffed up again and again in their faces; the crust on which they walked was hot to their feet, and almost continual tremors ran through the earth. When at last they pushed through the final curtain of mist and came out close to a house, there was not one of the party but drew a long breath of relief, even though they all knew that the crater had long been occupied by men and must be perfectly safe.

In front of the building Archman halted. "Friends all," he said. "Captain Strindberg! The time has come to lift a curtain that fell more than twenty years ago, when one whose name I will not mention, even now, quit his great place in the world to marry the woman of his choice. He sailed away with her to conceal himself so that he might live in democratic freedom from the restrictions that hedge about a court. Here he came and here he has lived since, and here his wife is buried."

"He did not live idly. He had already won a reputation for chemical research, and here he broadened and expanded his knowledge. He called to his aid the heat and gases that alone survived of the mighty forces that once filled this place. Many inventions he made and marketed through me, his servant. Many secrets of nature he discovered, among others the secret of the diamond. He harnessed the volcano and bent it to his will."

"One lot of diamonds he made and sent to me by the hands of his servant, Morbach. Most of you know how Morbach was robbed and murdered. I do not know whether the criminal has been discovered—"

"Not the murderer, father." It was Nellie who interrupted. "But the man, Henry Harrison, who picked Mr. Morbach up after the auto accident, has confessed that he came back to Miss Grant's cottage in disguise and got the map and the diamonds from Mr. Morbach. Later he shipped on board the El Rio under the name of Price and led the mutiny."

"Humph! That explains much! I will say here that his highness has made no more diamonds and will make no more. The secret is lost. And now perhaps Captain Strindberg will explain why he seeks his highness—why he has sought him so desperately that he or his friends corrupted my secretary and bribed him to play traitor—"

"Akin?" The exclamation came from all.

"Yes! Akin was the traitor. I suspected him before I left New York, but I thought that once I had gotten away he would be harmless. But Captain Bunker and I are now satisfied that it was he who signaled to the pursuing ship and—Archman broke off—"I will ask Captain Strindberg to remove him from the El Rio. He turned to the officer. "Captain," he finished, "perhaps you will explain."

The captain shrugged his shoulders. "His highness is needed in Denmark," he said. "Our secret service knew he would be needed sooner or later, and when he disappeared we tried to find him. Little by little we picked up the trail. We learned of Archman and of Morbach and of the existence of children." His eyes wandered to Nellie. "And now we have found him. In the search we have had to do things that we regret; but one cannot be squeamish when kingdoms—even small ones—are at stake. Success excuses all!" He shrugged his shoulders. "Enough!" he snapped. "Lead me to his highness."

Archman bowed. "Come!" he said, and turned toward the house.

Side by side the two mounted the stairs and entered the door. Behind them came the rest of the civilians. The sailors, under the command of the lieutenant, remained outside.

Archman threw open the door of the room to the right of the hall and ushered in his companions. He took off his hat as he entered; and the others, after a gasp of comprehension, did likewise.

In the middle of the room, on two trestles, surrounded by flaring tapers, rested a coffin draped in black, whose open glass front revealed the figure of a huge man whose waxen features bore, even in death, an ineffable air of majesty and mastery. Archman looked at him reverently. "This is his highness," he said.

The officer blinked. "I recognize him," he said, after an instant. "He is not very greatly changed since I knew him."

"I, too!" Lord George stepped forward. "I knew his highness years ago. That was why I was selected by my government to follow a clew associated with Mr. Archman and try to find him. I recognize him. He was a real statesman—one who gave promise of being a powerful figure in Europe, captain. Naturally my government, like many others, was interested in his strange disappearance. There have been rumors of a great war, you know."

Strindberg bowed. "I thank you, Lord Caruthers," he said. "His highness' death will be a great blow to Denmark. And his sons and daughters? What of them?" he looked at Archman.

"He leaves no sons!" Archman spoke deliberately.

"Perhaps it is as well. The marriage of his highness was morganatic and a son might complicate matters. But a daughter would be different." The captain's eyes wandered to Nellie, who stood hand in hand with Van Kull. "His majesty instructs me to say that his feelings toward any daughter are of the kindest. He offers her a title, great wealth, and a noble husband—everything that the customs of our country permit." The captain turned to Archman. "You can, of course, furnish proofs as to her identity?" he questioned.

"Yes!" Archman rose from a safe into which he had been delving and came forward. In his hands he held a sheaf of folded papers. "Yes!" he repeated. "The proofs are all here and are in due order. His highness meant to give them to his daughter yesterday. Unfortunately he decided to wait till today, hoping to be stronger. But last evening he died. I was with him when I received the news of the arrival of the El Rio. That was why I delayed. But the proofs are indubitable. I hand them to her who is more concerned."

With a sudden gesture he placed the papers in Nellie's hands. "Take them, my dear!" he said, his voice breaking.

Van Kull dropped the girl's hand and stepped back. His face was very white.

Nellie glanced at him. Then her eyes circled the room, and she shrank back slightly as she met the eyes centered upon her. Then with a quick indrawing of breath she spoke.

"Captain Strindberg," she said clearly, "let me understand. Would the daughter of his highness have to give up her Americanism, her home, her lover, her all?"

The captain bowed. "Madame," he said, "it would be almost impossible for her to avoid doing so."

Nellie nodded. "And in return she would get—what? An introduction to a court of strangers, a sum of money, a husband picked out for her by someone else? I'm sorry, but the price is too high!" With a sudden movement she thrust the papers into the flame of one of the tall tapers that burned at the dead man's head.

As they flamed up Strindberg made a sudden movement to snatch them. Then, as abruptly, he desisted and stood still while the papers burned.

With fitting ceremony, they buried the dead statesman that afternoon.

In the evening, when they were all gathered together, Nellie again addressed the Danish officer.

"I understand how seriously you, who love your country, Captain Strindberg, take this matter. I have a natural affection for your country—the country of my poor dead father. But—can't you see? Your proofs and summons come a generation too late! I'm an American—a Yank clear through and proud of it. And so is Henry Archman, though he loved and respected his old friend, my father."

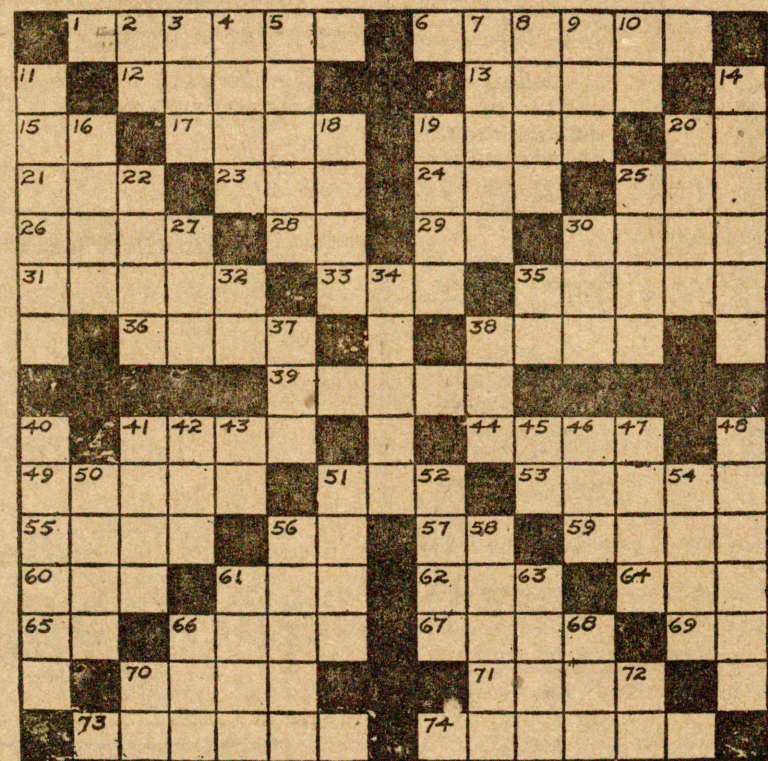

"Surest thing you know!" roared Archman. "You're all right, Strindberg, but the girl's her own boss! Captain Bunker, we sail for New York tomorrow morning!"

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete terms are indicated in the definitions.

Women, Why Suffer?

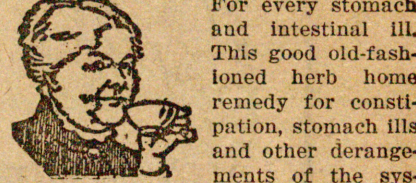

Quincy, Ill.—"I was relieved of feminine trouble, which had caused me to suffer with headache and other distressing feelings, by simply taking a few bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I have had no return of the trouble and I am glad to recommend this tonic to all women who suffer. I wish someone had told me about this remedy long before they did."—Mrs. Rose Davis, 525 S. 3rd St.

Appreciative

Betty Blythe was preparing for one of her personal-appearance tours and as she wanted to make a good impression she studied her monologue every chance she got. Her opening line began: "My name is Betty Blythe."

While walking down Hollywood boulevard she was still studying, saying her lines over and over again with the result that she bumped into three young men.

Betty was so startled that she blurted out: "My name is Betty Blythe," at the top of her voice.

"Thanks," laughed one of the trio, "and while you're about it, what's your phone number?"—Los Angeles Times.

The Wrong Time

"When I left college I didn't owe anyone a cent."

"What an awful time to leave."

Pimples

BLOOD impurities are pumped by the heart into the face. That is what causes that grainy appearance, that muddiness, sallowness, pimples, blackheads, acne, red spots, and that impossible "something" which no face cream, massage, or face powder can cover up or beautify! The foundation for a beautiful skin simply is not there, and no face treatment can give it to you. But increase your red-blood-cells, and quickly the ruby tint of purity begins to glow in the cheeks, the complexion becomes venous-like and immaculate! Try it. It will do it every time. S.S.S. builds the red-blood-cells you need for a beautiful complexion. Begin using S.S.S. at once, and give yourself what you have been working for, for years.

S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

Neglected Cough Dangerous—How to Stop It Quickly

When the delicate tissues of your throat are raw and sore from coughing, and your strength is exhausted with the constant hacking, you may fall an easy prey to more serious trouble. So stop the cough the quickest you can, before it creeps too deep. By a very simple treatment you can stop the spells practically at once, and relieve the heaviest cough often in 24 hours. The treatment is based on a remarkable prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You simply take a teaspoonful and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing, without following with water. It has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but it quickly loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the coughing. With the cause treated in this way the whole cough condition goes in a very short time.

The prescription contains no opiates or harmful drugs. It simply helps Nature. It is for coughs, chest colds, hoarseness, bronchitis and spasmodic croup. Very economical, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. For sale at all good druggists. Ask for
